or other similar combustible material, or in any building over tidal or navigable water; nor shall a range oil-burner be installed above the ground floor of any building, except under special circumstances approved by the Fire Marshal.

"(b.) Every range oil-burner shall bear the approval of the National Research Council of Canada, and no range oil-burner shall be installed, operated, or used unless the oil fuel used therein is of a specific gravity and specification approved for use therein by the National Research Council of Canada.

"(c.) Positive bottom ventilation and adequate air-supply shall be provided by permanently securing the air-regulating device on the front of the range or furnace to which the range oil-burner is attached in an open position; and all smoke-pipes, flues, and flue-passages shall be thoroughly cleaned before the range oil-burner is installed. No smoke-pipe damper which cuts off more than eighty per centum of the smoke-pipe area shall be installed or maintained.

"(d.) All cracks, chinks, and other openings in the combustion-chamber of the range or furnace shall be sealed with fireclay in such a manner that there is no opening connecting therewith except those leading to the ventilation air-supply, the smoke-pipe, and the oil-fuel feed-line.

"(e.) The clear distance between the smoke-pipe and any woodwork or other combustible construction shall in no case be less than nine inches, and the range or furnace shall be so set that no wood-work or other combustible construction will be exposed to temperatures sufficiently great to cause damage thereto.

"(f.) All electrical devices used for preheating or igniting range oil-burners shall be installed in full compliance with The Canadian Electrical Code as adopted in the Province of British Columbia, with variations, under the provisions of the 'Electrical Energy Inspection Act.' No gasoline or other highly volatile inflammable liquid shall be used for priming a range oil-burner, and only the device supplied by the manufacturer of the range oil-burner shall be used for igniting it.

"(g.) A card with complete instructions for the operation of the range oil-burner printed thereon in legible type shall be posted up in a conspicuous place near each range oil-burner.

"12. The following special provisions shall apply in respect of the installation of range oil-burners for use in ranges:—

"(a.) In case of vacuum-control feed, the supply-tank shall not exceed three gallons in capacity, and shall be equipped with a positive indicating device which shows clearly at all times the amount of oil fuel in the tank; and in all other cases the supply-tank shall not exceed six gallons in capacity. The supply-tank shall be so mounted as to present a rigid structure capable of withstanding external shocks and ordinary service abuse. After the first day of August, 1934, no supply-tank shall be installed or used unless it is constructed of metal of not less than 24-gauge (B.S.G.). The supply-tank shall be located not less than two feet from the range and not less than three feet from the flame in the range. Every supply-tank of the gravity-feed type shall be equipped with a close-fitting lid which has an overlap of not less than three-quarters of an inch all around, and which has a breather-hole of not less than one-thirty-second of an inch in diameter located at or near the centre of the lid.

"(b.) The oil-fuel feed-line shall enter the range through a hole drilled in the casing, and shall be of copper or brass tubing of not less than five-sixteenths of an inch outside diameter and having a wall thickness of not less than forty-nine one-thousandths of an inch, or of standard full-weight galvanized iron, steel, or brass pipe of not less than one-quarter of an inch or more than one-half of an inch inside diameter. The tubing or piping shall be installed in a rigid manner sufficient to withstand external shocks and ordinary service abuse. In case of vacuum-control feed, there shall be a control-valve located at a level not less than one inch below the level of the burner base and not less than one inch below the level of the supply-tank; and in all other cases there shall be a constant-level control-valve of an approved type installed in such a manner as to maintain the required level of the oil fuel in the burner base. In all cases the control-valve shall be rigidly supported in a manner that will not cause strain to be put on the oil-fuel feed-line.

"(c.) The oil-burner base shall be made and rigidly set at the proper level by reinforcing the bottom of the range by a piece of sheet metal not less than eight inches wide, ten inches long, and one-eighth of an inch thick, held in position by the burner pedestal bolts which shall be secured in place by means of lock-nuts. In the case of vacuum-control feed, the oil-fuel flow-level shall be such as will permit the control-valve to be opened and the flow to continue at full capacity for twenty minutes without overflowing or flooding the combustion chamber. When the proper level is ascertained by adjusting the oil-burner base and the supply-tank, the base and tank shall be securely set and locked in position.

"13. The following special provisions shall apply in respect of the installation of range oil-burners for use in furnaces:—

"(a.) Not more than three range oil-burners shall be installed in any furnace.

"(b.) In case of vacuum-control feed, the supply-tanks connected to the range oil-burners in any furnace shall not exceed two in number, nor shall a supply-tank exceed three gallons in capacity; and in all other cases the supply-tank shall not exceed fifty-five gallons in capacity.

"(c.) Every supply-tank having a capacity of more than six gallons shall be installed on an incombustible stand not less than one foot and not more than three feet from the floor, and not less than ten feet from the furnace. The tank shall be made of sheet metal of not less than No. 14 B.S.G. and shall have all seams riveted and caulked, brazed-welded or electrically welded in such a manner as to be mechanically and hydraulically tight. The tank shall be equipped with an outside vent-pipe of galvanized iron of not less than three-quarters of an inch inside diameter, which shall rise to a height of not less than twelve feet above the ground-level and shall be equipped with a return bend. The opening for filling shall be in the top of the supply-tank, and shall be equipped with a screw-plug which shall, except when the tank is being filled, be kept screwed into the opening. Where oil fuel is filled into the supply-tank from a tank wagon it shall be done by means of a hose equipped with an automatic shut-off nozzle so adjusted that when the operator's hand is removed the flow of liquid will immediately be cut off. Where the oil fuel is delivered in drums the liquid shall be pumped from the drum to the supply-tank by means of an approved pump. No oil fuel shall be delivered to any such supply-tank by means of open can or bucket.

"(d.) The constant-level control-valve shall be mounted at or near the furnace on a pedestal from the floor or on brackets from the furnace in such a manner as to be rigid and to withstand external shocks and ordinary service abuse.

"(e.) The oil-fuel feed-line from the supply-tank to the constant-level control-valve shall be of standard full-weight galvanized iron or brass pipe of not less than one-quarter of an inch or more than one-half of an inch inside diameter, and shall have a positive shut-off valve at the supply-tank and an approved strainer at or near the constant-level control-valve. The oil-fuel feed-line from the constant-level control-valve to the oil-burner may be either of standard full-weight galvanized iron or brass pipe of not less than one-quarter and not more than one-half of an inch inside diameter, or of brass or copper tubing of not less than five-sixteenths of an inch outside diameter and having a wall thickness of not less than forty-nine one-thousandths of an inch, and shall enter the furnace through a hole drilled in the casing.

"(f.) No inside storage-tank shall be located above the lowest floor of any building, nor shall any inside storage-tank exceed fifty-five gallons in capacity. Where delivery of oil fuel is made in a drum or steel barrel, the drum or barrel may be used for storage purposes. Where delivery of oil fuel is made by tank wagon, the storage-tank shall conform in all respects to the requirements laid down in clause (c) of this regulation respecting supply-tanks. For the purpose of transferring oil fuel from the storage-tank, drum, or barrel to the supply-tank an approved pump shall be used. No faucet, spigot, or other gravity device and no siphon shall be installed or used for the purpose of withdrawing oil fuel from the storage-tank, drum, or barrel."
